PRINTER "GOT ROSY."

Apitezo Was Proven and in Great Demand Before It Was Put on the Market

The Times has received for publication the continued series of the very interesting Apitezo advertisements which have already run in this paper for about six weeks. A representative of The American Cereal Company of Chicago, makers of Apitezo, was in the city re-cently and cited several remarkable examples of the interest taken in new cereals by practically the whole of the American public today. Some weeks before Apitezo was placed upon the market, a printer, who was setting up the Apitezo booklet and some of the Apitezo advertisements, found that the text, which was passing through his hands, so aptly described his own case—pale blooded and aenemic—that his interest was aroused. He sent to the Apitezo kitchens and se-cured several packages of the new food. The good results were so evident and rapid that the printer, whose clear skin and brighter eye had already at-tracted the notice of his companions, started enthusiastically to recommend Apitezo to all his friends. He was much embarrassed to discover that Apitezo was not yet on the market, and many of his friends would hardly believe that it existed. Indeed for many weeks before The American Cereal Company was ready to american Cereat Company was ready to sell its new product orders were being received by letter, telephone and even telegraph, for the new Iron Food, the name of which was unknown to very many of the wholesalers and grocers who ordered it.

In Barre, as in all other cities where Apitezo has been placed on sale, it has jumped into instant popularity. The food is so absolutely unique that every one has to try it. They find it delicious, and continue it. Then better spirits and health come and Apitezo is given its place as a staple food. The most nutritious of cereal foods, rich in plant iron, and most delicious to taste. No wonder Apitezo wins!

Think of the temptation to an ordinary hand-to-mouth working man an offer of $10,000 dollars would be and yet there was more talk over Sam Parks' falling to this temptation than there would be over half a hundred bank president robbing their respective Notwithstanding the much greater temptation the prospects of sudden wealth would be to a poor man than a comparatively wealthy one, cases of land fraud amongst union and friendly society officials are very rare contrasted with what may be called ordinary business concerns and speaks well for our class.

What a refining influence is the effect

ON CURRENT TOPICS

What a refining influence is the effect of civilization! In England and America it is only the uneducated that adopt the budgeon to rob people. The educated Anglo-Saxon does it by prespectuses, advertising, gambling, by manipulating figures and watering stock—especially watering. But who would have thought that even the water would get so valuable that people in this secluded spot far from the madding crowd of frenzied financiers, should be induced to "manipulating" the different water pipes. Poetic justice calls for the water cure in this case.

Had we been running good nut brown ale in our waterpipes, most Barre peo-ple I am sure would have forgiven a little tampering with the tubes. But water! No there is no excuse. ALEX ROBERTSON.
